

Congratulations to DHLab Training Scholarship Recipients

January 14, 2016

The Digital Humanities Lab would like to congratulate the recipients from the inaugural round of DHLab Training Scholarships: Andrew Wang (first-year PhD student in English), Masha Shpolberg (third-year PhD student in Comparative Literature and Film & Media Studies), and Graziano Krättli (Digital Projects and Technology Librarian, Divinity School Library). The $500 awards will help support their participation in week-long courses at the upcoming Digital Humanities Summer Institute. The courses include: "Feminist Digital Humanities: Theoretical, Social, and Material Engagements," "Digital Storytelling," and "Digital Humanities Databases."

DHLab Training Scholarships are open to Yale undergraduates, graduate students, and librarians. There will be a second round of Training Scholarships announced and awarded later in the spring semester. For more information, please visit DHLab Training Scholarships [1].

External link: <http://web.library.yale.edu/dhlab/trainingscholarshiprecipients> [2]

Source URL: <https://web.library.yale.edu/dhlab/trainingscholarshiprecipients>

Links

[1] <http://web.library.yale.edu/dhlab/trainingscholarships> [2]

<http://web.library.yale.edu/dhlab/trainingscholarshiprecipients>