Yale University Library has updated the request forms and associated web pages for its Interlibrary Loan and Scan and Deliver service. Users can check out the redesign at:

The redesign of the Interlibrary Loan and Scan and Deliver pages incorporates current design standards and the range of request fulfilment services offered by YUL, while delivering a consistent user experience throughout the YUL website. The updated pages will serve as a new foundation for additional automation in request placement and processing.

Interlibrary Loan is part of the evolving Get It @Yale service designed to assist users in obtaining material from Yale University Library's print and electronic collections and from libraries around the world. The newly revised forms present a streamlined navigation and selection process to users when placing requests for scanned or print copies of materials. Users can now easily cancel, modify and monitor the status of their pending requests and view all available and historical requests.

Users should anticipate no impact on their existing accounts and filled/pending requests. All data has been preserved during the redesign. If you would like to provide any feedback on the redesign please use the Feedback link within the Interlibrary Loan site.
