September 25, 2020  Most of the Yale libraries are now reopened to Yale faculty, graduate and professional students, and staff authorized to work on campus, with space and service modifications to protect health and safety. As of Sept. 19, library hours have been extended to include weekend hours in Sterling Library and Bass Library. BorrowDirect service has resumed as of Sept. 25. See our Library Reopening FAQ [1] for detailed information about library access, spaces, and services or address further questions to our Ask Yale Library service [2].
