October 30, 2020 At this time, Yale Library buildings are open to faculty, staff, and students who are authorized to be on campus. Patrons must wear face coverings at all times in all library spaces, maintain physical distance from other patrons and staff, and comply with University health and safety guidelines.

Library hours [1] have been extended to include weekends and evenings until Nov. 20, and then will be reduced until Feb. 1. The reading rooms of the Beinecke Library, Manuscripts and Archives, and other special collections repositories are open to Yale researchers by appointment.

Key library services including Scan and Deliver, BorrowDirect, interlibrary loan, and request for pickup are now available to current faculty, students, and staff. As part of its pandemic response, Yale Library has introduced mail-to-address or delivery to on-campus housing of library materials.

Library staff who can do their jobs remotely continue to work from home. Research consultations, library instruction, workshops, and library events are being offered online only.

See the Library Reopening FAQ [2] for more detailed parameters or send questions to Ask Yale Library [3].
