January 6 Sterling Memorial Library, including contactless pickup in the nave, is now open to current Yale graduate and professional students, staff, and faculty (including emeriti) who have been authorized to be on campus. Other library locations and special collections reading rooms will open to the same groups on Jan. 12. See the Library Reopening FAQ [1] for location-specific details.

Under the university's COVID-19 guidelines, we cannot extend access to Yale retirees, family members, alumni, other Yale affiliates, or the general public to Yale libraries and special collections at this time. We regret any inconvenience, and we look forward to welcoming our extended community when public health conditions improve.

Hours, including for contactless pickup, may change on short notice due to COVID-19. Check library hours [2] before coming to campus. Library staff continue to provide research consultations, workshops, library instruction, and access to electronic resources online. Current students, faculty, and staff may request to have library materials, including BorrowDirect materials and interlibrary loans, scanned or mailed to U.S. addresses.
