November 6 While the University has moved its COVID-19 alert level [1]to orange, Yale Library remains open to faculty, students, and staff who are approved to be on campus. Opening hours will be shortened after Nov. 20 when undergraduates leave campus. The current schedule, the post-Nov. 20 schedule, and holiday closing dates can be found on our building hours page [2]. Library staff continue to provide research consultations, workshops, library instruction, and access to electronic resources online. Current students, faculty, and staff may request to have library materials, including BorrowDirect materials and interlibrary loans, delivered to campus residences or mailed to their home addresses in the U.S. See the Library Reopening FAQ [3] for more details about services, or send questions to Ask Yale Library [4].
